ONE KILLED, SEVEN HURT IN EXPLOSION ABOARD OIL TANKER

Blazing Oil Rains On Water Adding To Hazards

BAYONNE, N. J., Aug. 9.—One man was killed and seven were known to have been injured in a series of explosions aboard the tanker William E. Rockefeller at Pier 6 of the Standard Oil Company today.

The dead man was identified as John Ward, watchman for a shipping protective association. He was believed to have been blown from the Rockefeller's deck by the first explosion.

The blasts shook Essex County, New Jersey, broke windows along the New Brighton, Staten Island, waterfront, and sent hundreds of persons to their telephones in a panic.

The tanker caught fire and poured blazing oil into the Kill Van Kull. The flames spread across the Kill toward Staten Island, and tugs immediately scouted through the inferno picking up the tanker's crew members from the hissing waters.

The body of the dead man was floating near the tanker. The seven injured men, some with broken bones and all of them burned, were picked from the water, rushed ashore and hurried in ambulances and private cars to Staten Island Hospital.

All seven had jumped from the decks when the first explosion was followed by several other blasts and by belching fire in the forward hold. Fifteen minutes after the first concussion, there was a final puff and roar.

Black smoke rolled in palls from the huge tanker as tugs and the New York City fireboat Zophar Mills, sped to the scene. The dark billows flattened out and then settled over Staten Island until it became necessary to turn on lights in the stores and homes there.

The dead man was not immediately identified.

The injured were:

Van Kennedy, 20, burns on head and body.

Roy Dobaldi, 22, fractured left forearm and burns on body.

Jack Glemellon, 18, of Baton Rouge, La., burns on legs and back.

Leo Herbert, 21, of St. Gabriel, La., burns and fracture of bones in left chest.

Frank Warrillo, 44, Stapleton, S. I., burns on head and body.

A. Rebero, 40, Jersey City, burns on arms and face.

John Burns, 62, of Queens Village, L. I., lacerated scalp and burns on arms.

Police were told that Edward Haley, 20, Brooklyn, a crew member was overcome by oil fumes aboard the ship an hour before the explosion. It was presumed the gas which overcame him was ignited later and caused the blasts.

DON'T WASH MONEY!

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The treasury today warned persons with new money not to make the mistake of sending any of the currency to the laundry in their clothing.

This tip came after secret service agents reported from Beaumont, Tex., that one of the new five dollar "flivers" greenbacks mysteriously turned from green to gold.

It was first thought that the money was counterfeit but later an investigation showed the bill had gone to a laundry in a shirt having washing powder caused it to change color.

POLICE TAKE THREE AFTER PISTOL DUEL FOLLOWING HOLDUP

Two Gunmen Shot; One May Die From Bullet Wound

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—After a desperate gun fight, a police squad today captured three gunmen as they were attempting to escape after robbing "The Blind Pig," an East Side bar.

In the running gun fight, one of the holdup men was probably fatally wounded, another was knocked down by a bullet which creased his skull, and the third was captured in a taxicab before he could flee.

Police in the fight were unharmed, although two of the trio fired more than thirty shots in their battle for freedom.

The three gave their names as William E. Lake, 31, and Walter Smith, 28, both of Cleveland, and Pen Crawford, 33, of Chicago. Lake was shot in the abdomen and is not expected to live.

A police squad was cruising by the barbecue when a night watchman overhauled them and told them of three suspicious men who had entered the stand. They had no sooner alighted when Lake and Smith ran from the stand and opened fire on the officers. The officers sought refuge behind a nearby voting booth and returned the fire.

Lake fell wounded just as he reached the waiting taxicab in which Crawford was sitting. Smith commandeered a passing auto, ordered the four occupants out, and was starting out when he was stunned by a bullet.

The third man of the group, Crawford, was captured in the taxicab. He was unarmed and offered no resistance.

After preliminary questioning, police said they believed the three gunmen were responsible for ten or twelve holdups in Cleveland during the last two weeks. The three operated in a small coupe which answered descriptions of similar holdup cars.

At the Blind Pig, Crawford, the cash register of $36, obtained $23 from a waiter and two customers and were making their get-away when the night watchman hailed the passing police car.

THREE KILLED IN AIR CRASH

They were circling at a height estimated at more than 1,000 feet when the plane was seen to burst into flames. It plunged to the earth like a great torch, striking with such force, that the engine was driven twenty inches into the ground.

DRY AGENTS BARRED FROM USING RIFLES IN NEW DORAN ORDER

Revolvers Will Be Only Weapons Of Officers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran today drafted an order to dry agents forbidding the carrying of rifles by prohibition agents except when they work in isolated sections.

Hereafter agents will be armed only with revolvers, as a previous order by Doran banned the carrying of sawed off shot guns and similar weapons.

Doran said that prohibiting the carrying of rifles would aid in the campaign to reduce fatal shootings by dry officers, as they now are armed only for self-protection and to prevent the committing of a felony.

"There appears to be no necessity for prohibition agents to carry rifles when working in settled communities," Doran said. "The rifle is essentially an offensive weapon and the prohibition service does not bear arms for offensive purposes. In communities pistols must be used exclusively, as agents are armed only to defend their lives."

"However, in mountain country or on the little-settled plains where long-range defense of an agent's life may be necessary, rifles will be permitted. Frequently in mountain moonshine raids officers are sniped at over ranges of 300 yards. The same conditions probably would obtain on the open plains."

The new order was promulgated following the killing of Tom Chandler, of Poteet, Texas, by Agent Charles Stevens. Doran said reports in this case showed Stevens fell and the rifle he carried was accidentally discharged, causing the death of the farmer.

Doran said no prohibition agents were armed with machine guns or automatic rifles but added that some bootleggers and rum runners especially in the vicinity of Detroit, have adopted a highly aggressive attitude toward federal enforcement officers.

"The government must meet these attempts at violence and intimidation with plenty of resistance," Doran said. "We are not going to be bluffed. More men will be provided and they will be fully armed to meet the moves of bootleggers if the situation warrants it."

STATE DRY AGENTS TO HAVE PICTURES

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—State prohibition inspectors have been instructed by prohibition commissioner Rupert R. Beetham to have their photographs taken, not for beauty contest competition, but as a means of identification and to guard against imposters posing as state agents.

Each agent, according to Beetham's plan, will be required to have his photograph attached to his commission as an officer, which he must carry at all times as evidence of his identity and authority.

The new identification plan will be in operation within the next ten days, it is believed.

ZEPPELIN NEARING EUROPEAN COAST ON TRIP AROUND WORLD

Graf Will Reach Friedrichshafen On Saturday

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Graf Zeppelin was approaching the coast of Europe today, having encountered splendid weather and favorable winds in the first day of its round-the-world commercial flight from Lakehurst, N. J. Friedrichshafen, Germany, is the Graf's immediate objective.

It was calculated that the dirigible should reach its home station at about 2:30 p. m. E. S. T. tomorrow. A continuation of fresh west winds which were expected to add twenty or twenty-five miles per hour to the Graf's speed would hasten its arrival.

All was well aboard the great grey airship as it sped eastward across the Atlantic with its twenty-two passengers and forty crew members. Private messages from the group of air voyagers indicated that the passengers, particularly the ones making their first dirigible flight, were having the "time of their lives."

At 11 o'clock last night the Graf reported her position to the United States navy as 41:20 degrees north and 45:05 west, 1,500 miles from New York. She was traveling almost due east from New York. Dr. Hugo Eckener having abandoned his idea of following the great circle course in an effort to take advantage of northwest and west winds.

The government weather report from Washington said that during the first half of today the Graf would be faced by brisk tail winds and that it would be flying through "mostly fair weather."

The Zeppelin, while reporting to United States wireless stations, also was in communication with Germany. The naval radio at Cape Elizabeth reported to the Charleston radio station at Boston that the Graf had communicated with Nordeich station for a prolonged period.

The course the Graf was following would take her north of the Azores this morning. Dr. Eckener was expected then to veer northward, pointing almost directly for Friedrichshafen.

The speed with which the Graf was clicking off the miles gave promise of a record for a dirigible crossing. During the first nineteen hours of the flight the airship maintained an average of close to seventy knots and the speed at times went nearly to 100 miles per hour.

The first full day of the flight which is to take the Graf around the world and back to Lakehurst in seventeen days was uneventful aboard the dirigible except for the entertainment afforded the passengers at bridge and other social activities.

LUNA PARK STADIUM DESTROYED BY FIRE ON FRIDAY MORNING

Spectacular Blaze Razes Cleveland Athletic Plant

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—The Luna Park Stadium, scene of many football, baseball and soccer games, lay in ashes today.

It was destroyed in the early morning hours by a spectacular blaze that attracted a crowd of 20,000 persons, created an almost hopeless traffic jam, and kept 125 firemen fighting for three hours to keep it under control.

The loss will be $60,000, H. A. Gould, owner and operator said.

The blaze consumed all except a small corner of the horseshoe-shaped structure designed to seat 22,000 spectators.

Telephone poles, adjoining the stadium, caught fire from the terrific heat. Wires dropped to the street and endangered the lives of spectators who were crowding close. The whole district was thrown into darkness when the light company shut off the current, and telephone lines were out of commission.

The stadium was partly destroyed by fire once before on Aug. 11, 1927. Damage at that time was $30,000. The structure had been built at a cost of $74,000.

ENFORCEMENT LEAGUE MEMBERS REFUSED RACE BETTING TICKETS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—After swooping down on the Bainbridge race track in an effort to obtain evidence of gambling, fourteen members of the Geauga County Enforcement League admitted today they had failed in their efforts to buy "contribution" tickets.

The fourteen were associates of the Rev. Warren Bechtold, chairman of the Enforcement League, who has been a leader in the fight to close the track.

Bechtold said yesterday he had also received a threat that he would be "bumped off" if he did not let up in his activities to fight the race operators.

Others had no difficulty in purchasing "contribution" tickets, the League members were unable to post their money.

They intended to use the evidence, it was said to take before a justice of the peace and swear to warrants calling for the arrest of the track operators.

SUSPECT CONFESSES DOUBLE SILVER MURDER IN EATON, OHIO

EATON, O., Aug. 9.—Joseph Edelman, held by New York police, has confessed the slaying on Dec. 8, 1928, of Dr. Horatio Silver, 38, Preble County health commissioner, during a robbery of his home, Marshal Willard Armstrong was informed today.

Marshal Armstrong said he would leave for New York tonight to return the suspect to Eaton.

Advices to Armstrong did not mention whether Edelman also assumed responsibility for the death of Mrs. Silver who was killed with her husband when the burglars were surprised ransacking the home.

Mrs. Silver was killed instantly and her husband died about five hours later after an emergency operation at a Dayton hospital.

Dr. Silver, it was recalled, was able to give a brief account of the shooting before he lapsed into unconsciousness.

He said he and Mrs. Silver heard a noise about 1:30 a. m. and left their bed to investigate, when they were commanded to return. While complying, two shots rang out, officers grouped about Dr. Silver as he was removed to the hospital though they heard him say:

No information could be obtained as to how many robbers entered the home, but it was believed there were at least two, as bullets of different caliber were found in the bodies.

Dr. Silver was a cousin to Harry D. Silver, state finance director.

PROSECUTOR MAKES SNOOK SHOW MANNER OF ATTACKING GIRL

Demonstrates Blows; Story Of Accused Unprintable

COURT ROOM, Columbus, O., Aug. 9.—Dr. James Howard Snook was carried in recollection today over the trail his illicit but "convenient arrangement" with Theora Hix had traveled and which ended in her death and his trial for murder.

As a witness he pitted his own cold personality against a ruthless, fiery assault of John J. Chester, prosecutor. For Dr. Snook it was perhaps a battle for self preservation.

The prospect of seeing a man in what amounted almost to a mortal combat with wits as weapons, drew a record crowd.

Chester opened the examination with a few scattering questions on lighter subjects which Snook answered with a quiet, unruffled directness. But of a sudden Chester shouted a pointed query on Snook's domestic relations and Snook's face grew flushed. His lawyers saved him from answering.

Next he told of his drive on the night of the murder with Miss Hix to the New York Central ride range and in a moment had been plunged into a description of intimacies which occurred there as complete as a clinical report.

Snook showed no relish when

HAS TWO VOICES

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—When Dr. James Howard Snook left the witness chair at adjournment of court last night he had been testifying for a total of twelve hours, yet his voice was only beginning to show a slight weakening.

"You see I have two voices really," he explained.

"One is higher pitched than the other. I am used to speaking higher as it does not tire me so. It is not the voice I use in the class room."

The pink combination garment that Theora wore was held before him and he was asked to examine its pattern—in fact its every button.

Dr. Snook denied a long list of statements he was alleged to have made during the seventeen hours he was questioned after his arrest. He was told to describe the unprintable detail of a clinical study, the wild attack he maintained Theora made upon him leading to their fatal struggle.

An hour was spent taking him over the detail of the questioning that led to his alleged confession. He testified Prosecutor Chester had struck him three times and "I took it."

Chester walked to the witness chair and stood over him.

"Didn't you tell me that you wouldn't talk anymore?" asked Chester.

"I never said I wouldn't," answered Snook.

"And then didn't I hit you with my open hand on one side of the face, the other I am used to speaking higher as it does not tire me so. It is not the voice I use in the class room."

Through most of it Dr. Snook maintained a complete, unruffled composure. As noon approached his face was a bit flushed, his answers a little more nervously excited.

"It didn't seem like an open hand to me."

Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and former Boston lawyer who brought about the recent German reparations agreement, is, in the opinion of 200 prominent business executives studying at the Harvard University Institute of Business, "the greatest business man in America."

ENFORCEMENT LEAGUE MEMBERS REFUSED RACE BETTING TICKETS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—After swooping down on the Bainbridge race track in an effort to obtain evidence of gambling, fourteen members of the Geauga County Enforcement League admitted today they had failed in their efforts to buy "contribution" tickets.

The fourteen were associates of the Rev. Warren Bechtold, chairman of the Enforcement League, who has been a leader in the fight to close the track.

SUSPECT CONFESSES DOUBLE SILVER MURDER IN EATON, OHIO

EATON, O., Aug. 9.—Joseph Edelman, held by New York police, has confessed the slaying on Dec. 8, 1928, of Dr. Horatio Silver, 58, Preble County health commissioner, during a robbery of his home.

Marshall Willard Armstrong was informed today.

Marshall Armstrong said he would leave for New York tonight to return the suspect to Eaton.

Advices to Armstrong did not mention whether Edelman also assumed responsibility for the death of Mrs. Silver who was killed with her husband when the burglars were surprised ransacking the home.

Mrs. Silver was killed instantly and her husband died about five hours later after an emergency operation at a Dayton hospital.

Dr. Silver, it was recalled, was able to give a brief account of the shooting before he lapsed into unconsciousness.

He said he and Mrs. Silver heard a noise about 4:30 a. m. and left their bed to investigate, when they were commanded to return.

While complying, two shots rang out, officers grouped about Dr. Silver as he was removed to the hospital thought they heard him say:

No information could be obtained as to how many robbers entered the home, but it was believed there were at least two, as bullets of different caliber were found in the bodies.

Dr. Silver was a cousin to Harry D. Silver, state finance director.

REDISCOUNT RATE SPURS SPECULATION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Recent speculative activity which has carried brokers loans to new peaks for the last four successive weeks has its answer from the federal reserve board—a raise to 6 per cent in the rediscount rate of the New York bank.

Announcement of the boost came yesterday after the stock market had closed. It was contemplated to stop, or at least curtail the large seepage of federal reserve funds into New York speculative market, observers have believed.

DELINQUENT TAXES LESS THAN IN 1928

Delinquent taxes will total considerably less than the amount last year in the opinion of Miss Helen Dodds, county treasurer, who is completing a compilation of the collection of the June tax installment. There is no way of accurately estimating the total delinquency at present; except that the books are cleaner than last year, indicating that the tax collection was greater than usual, Miss Dodds announced.

CRANE SAVES MEN

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Tom Janyky, crane engineer, sent a sixty-five-foot derrick through flames and reached thirty-five workmen trapped on a barge moored to a burning lakefront wharf here yesterday. The large Maids caught fire from flames which began by ignition of oil scum on the Cuyahoga River. The 600-foot dock of the Interlake Engineering Co. was ablaze.

ASKS FOR REVIEW

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—The East Ohio Gas Co., of Cleveland, asked the state supreme court to review decision of the Cuyahoga County appellate court in granting the city and state injunctions restraining it from abandoning service in Cleveland.

The appellate court had held that the gas company could not abandon its Cleveland court until an order to that effect was issued by the public utilities commission.

THREE INDICTED

DEFIANCE, Aug. 9.—The Defiance County grand jury indicted Orion Feikley, 23, his 19-year-old wife, Beatrice, both of Dayton and her brother Walter Lee, 1, Somerset, Ky., for burglary. The trio was arrested after a gun duels with marshals and a posse of farmers.

PROSECUTOR MAKES SNOOK SHOW MANNER OF ATTACKING GIRL

Demonstrates Blows; Story Of Accused Unprintable

COURT ROOM, Columbus, O., Aug. 9.—Dr. James Howard Snook was carried in recollection today over the trail his illicit but "convenient arrangement" with Theora Hix had traveled and which ended in her death and his trial for murder.

As a witness he pitted his own cold personality against a ruthless, fiery assault of John J. Chester, prosecutor. For Dr. Snook it was perhaps a battle for self preservation.

The prospect of seeing a man in that amounted almost to a mortal combat with wits as weapons, drew a record crowd.

Chester opened the examination with a few scattering questions on lighter subjects which Snook answered with a quiet, unruffled directness. But of a sudden Chester shouted a pointed query on Snook's domestic relations and Snook's face grew flushed. His lawyers saved him from answering.

Next he told of his drive on the night of the murder with Miss Hix to the New York Central ride range and in a moment had been plunged into a description of intimacies which occurred there as complete as a clinical report.

Snook showed no relish when

HAS TWO VOICES

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—When Dr. James Howard Snook left the witness chair at adjournment of court last night, he had been testifying for a total of twelve hours, yet his voice was only beginning to show a slight weakening.

"You see I have two voices really," he explained.

"One is higher pitched than the other. I am using the higher here as it does not tire me so. It is not the voice I use in the class room."

The pink combination garment that Theora wore was held before him and he was asked to examine its pattern—in fact its every button.

Dr. Snook denied a long list of statements he was alleged to have made during the seventeen hours he was questioned after his arrest.

He was forced to describe, with the unprintable detail of a clinical study, the wild attack he maintained Theora made upon him leading to their fatal struggle.

An hour was spent taking him over the detail of the questioning that led to his alleged confession.

He testified Prosecutor Chester had struck him three times and "I took it."

Chester walked to the witness chair and stood over him.

"Didn't you tell me that you wouldn't talk anymore?" asked Chester.

"I never said I wouldn't," answered Snook.

"And then didn't I hit you with my open hand on one side of the face, then on the other and then come back and hit you on the left side with my open hand?"

"It didn't seem like an open hand to me."

Through most of it Dr. Snook maintained a complete, unruffled composure. As noon approached his face was a bit flushed, his answers a little more nervously excited.

He sat with his knees crossed and his hands working nervously.

He repeated the story told yesterday of Miss Hix shouting in frenzy "You've got to help me!" and then committing an assault upon him causing him violent pain. It seemed not a detail was omitted.

Q—Then you hit her on the head with the hammer?

A—Yes and she stopped.

Q—Then what?

A—I got hold of her arm and twisted it.

Chester knelt in front of Snook in the position Miss Hix alleged had taken at asked Snook to demonstrate what he did. Snook was reluctant and Chester was insistent. Both talked at once.

"Go on, you can't hurt me," exclaimed Chester.

"Twist me around."

But Snook was gentle.

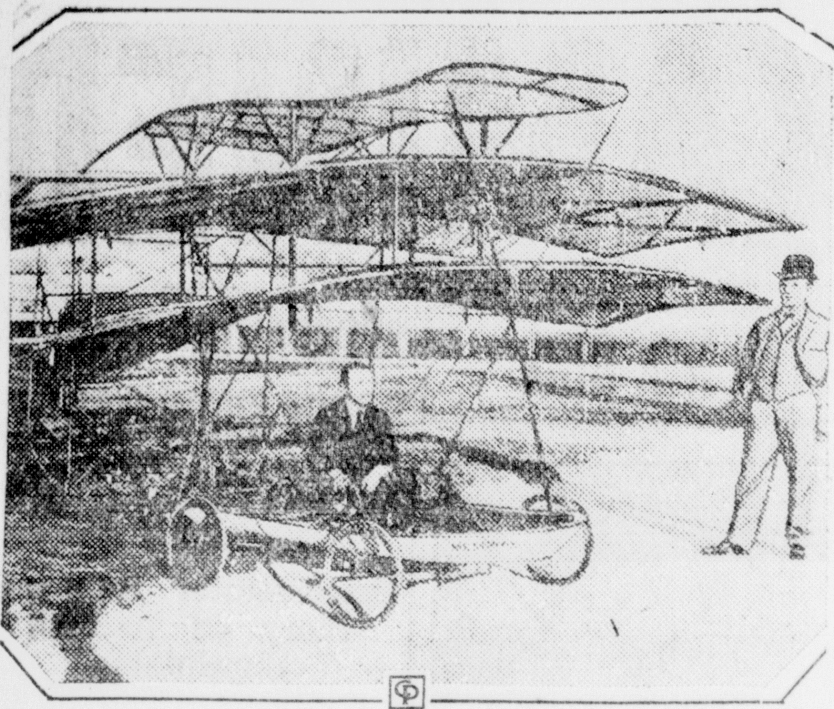

Chester next sat two chairs sid by side in front of the jury. He called Snook to one of them and took the other himself. It was supposed to represent the front seat of the Snook automobile at the time the tax collector Miss Hix.

QUEER FLYING BOAT

Built Twenty-Two Years Ago It Never Flew But Attracted Attention

MEMPHIS, Tenn., August 9.—Dedication recently of the municipal airport here brought to mind that C. H. "Doc" Hottum, former beer agent, a horseman, motorboat enthusiast, steamboat operator, cotton broker, swimming promoter of national fame and wrestling impresario, attempted to build an amphibian plane "way back in 1907—twenty-two years ago.

It was the first airplane in Memphis and Tennessee and probably the south. He and a German mechanic—he has forgotten the fellow's name—built it. They spent six months and hundreds of dollars.

"And then we were afraid to fly it," Doc confessed. "After we had finished it and stood off and looked it over, we decided that neither of us wanted to be fool enough to go up in it.

Plenty of Levers
"You see, in building the thing we made only one seat—the pilot's. But we had enough controls to keep six men busy. We started building it on my wharfboat in Wolf river, and we finished seven miles away at the Fairgrounds.

"We used piano wire, bamboo strips and some kind of special cloth.

"We created a sensation, all right. People would come out and stand and gaze at it. Some would shake their heads and call us crazy, and others would encourage us. In those days I was operating four steamboats and also was the owner of the 'Kitty Hawk,' the fastest motorboat in the world. I conceived the idea of building a plane that would take off from either land or water.

"I didn't execute the idea so well, but so far as I know I am the originator of the amphibians in airplanes.

Always Adding Something
"The mechanic who worked with me used to get an idea once in a while and put in another prop or hang on another wing. And the matter of lateral balance used to worry us like the dickens. We consumed many a bottle of beer at the corner saloon trying to figure out that balance.

"In 1909 I went to Louisville and bought a Curtiss plane and had it shipped here. A fellow named Harry Hoover and I put it together. He, also, wanted to be an aviator.

"We tried our derdest to fly. "And all the time my wife was simply raising the dickens. The motor would get hot after running

Poems that Live

DIVINA COMMEDIA

OF have I seen at some cathedral door
A laborer, pausing in the dust and heat,
Lay down his burden, and with reverent feet
Enter, and cross himself, and on the floor
Kneel to repeat his paternoster o'er;
Far off the noises of the world retreat;
The loud vociferations of the street
Become an indistinguishable roar.
So, as I enter here from day to day,
And leave my burden at this minister gate,
Kneeling in prayer, and not ashamed to pray,
The tumult of the time disconsolate
To inarticulate murmurs does away,
While the eternal ages watch and wait.

AGED WOMAN PLANS TRIP OVER NIAGARA

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The spirit of youth looks a little drab today after the chamber of commerce here received a letter from seventy-year-old Mrs. Susan Grove, of Baltimore, asking that the body sponsor her contemplated trip over Niagara Falls.

"It would be the first thrill of my life," writes Mrs. Grove, who has just turned three score and ten. She purports that she should make the descent in a rubber ball or a barrel.

REPARATIONS MEET NEAR COLLAPSE AS ULTIMATUM RESULT

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—The all-important international political and reparations conference stood on the verge of a complete breakdown today as a result of Great Britain's virtual ultimatum to her erstwhile Allies demanding a financial and technical revision of the Young plan.

Many of the political experts feared that unless Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the Exchequer, was prepared to suggest a solution to the crisis which was brought on by his own statements and demands at yesterday's session the whole negotiations would be threatened with an early collapse.

Snowden virtually declared that Great Britain would not compromise and that before she would consent to the discussion of other matters she would first have to be satisfied on three important points in connection with the Young plan—a change in the reparations percentages in favor of Britain, a revision of the unconditional payments which Germany will

In summing up the crisis the only thing the German delegates would say today was that if a fulfillment of Snowden's demands envisaged an increase in Germany's reparations burdens beyond the Young plan, the Reich representatives were not willing even to discuss the matters.

The suspicion of the Germans has been aroused considerably through the revelation that before the reparations conference in Paris the British, Italian and French financial experts held a conference in London to discuss methods of procedure and that they had reached a general agreement.

This fact came to the surface last night when Snowden declared that the delegates to that secret conference had promised that the Young plan would not change the existing Spa agreement regarding the distribution of reparations.

Henri Cheron, French finance minister, sprang to his feet and told Snowden that he did not know of any such agreement.

The Italian delegate, Signor Pirelli, asserted, however, that Snowden had misunderstood the agreement then reached.

This left the German delegates wondering what the conference of which apparently they had heard for the first time, dealt with besides the distribution of reparations, and left them more on their guard than ever before.

when an airplane crashed at Harrisonville, near here, today.

The passengers, Paul Dye of Niles and Howard Dye, of Columbus, brothers, were friends of Jordan and the latter consented to take them for a ride.

The plane nose-dived as Jordan attempted to land, eye-witnesses said. The three were pinned under parts of the wreckage but were extricated and brought to the hospital here.

The brothers came here early this week to visit their mother.

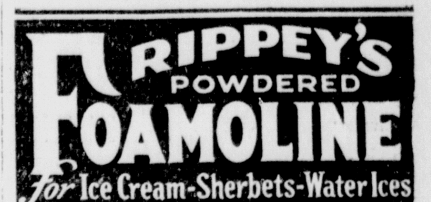

SECOND WEDDING OF JAMES JOYCE ENDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—The second marital venture of James Stanley Joyce, Chicago lumberman and one-time husband of Peggy Upton-Archer-Hopkins-Joyce-Morner, was on the rocks here today.

Joyce, who was divorced by his famous first wife on grounds of cruelty in 1921, was being sued by his second mate, Mrs. Nellie M. Joyce on the same grounds.

The bill charged Joyce with having beaten, burned and abused his wife on numerous occasions. While they were on their honeymoon in 1926, it says, he burned her lips with a match.

AGED WOMAN PLANS TRIP OVER NIAGARA

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The spirit of youth looks a little drab today after the chamber of commerce here received a letter from seventy-year-old Mrs. Susan Grove, of Baltimore, asking that the body sponsor her contemplated trip over Niagara Falls.

"It would be the first thrill of my life," writes Mrs. Grove, who has just turned three score and ten. She purports that she should make the descent in a rubber ball or a barrel.

REPARATIONS MEET NEAR COLLAPSE AS ULTIMATUM RESULT

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—The all-important international political and reparations conference stood on the verge of a complete breakdown today as a result of Great Britain's virtual ultimatum to her erstwhile Allies demanding a financial and technical revision of the Young plan.

Many of the political experts feared that unless Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the Exchequer, was prepared to suggest a solution to the crisis which was brought on by his own statements and demands at yesterday's session the whole negotiations would be threatened with an early collapse.

Snowden virtually declared that Great Britain would not compromise and that before she would consent to the discussion of other matters she would first have to be satisfied on three important points in connection with the Young plan—a change in the reparations percentages in favor of Britain, a revision of the unconditional payments which Germany will

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BETTER THAN THE BIRDS — Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? — Matthew 6:26.

THIS PROHIBITION

Mr. Upton Sinclair, writing in Le Mond, Paris, expresses his regret that that paper seems to have been misled by erroneous reports as to the operation of prohibition in America, and further says:

"The prohibition laws, even badly enforced as they are, have been of enormous benefit to the United States. They have raised the price of alcohol so that the worker cannot get it easily, and this is the main cause of the prosperity now enjoyed by the more highly paid workers in this country. It is also the cause of our industrial productivity which breaks all records. I doubt if the alcohol drunk in America today is one-tenth of that drunk before prohibition. I heard recently a remark by the chief of police of the city of Denver, which sums up the situation perfectly: 'The stuff comes in in Ford automobiles where previously it used to come by the freight car load.'

"I don't think I have seen a drunken man in California in three or four years, and I don't think I have seen more than two or three in ten years. I saw two or three upon a recent visit of two months in New York City. In the old days I would have seen hundreds in the same period of time.

"As to crime, a great deal of it is the crime of selling liquor and naturally that has increased with prohibition, since prior to prohibition it was no crime to sell liquor. There are many causes of crime in the United States—our great inequality of wealth, and unemployment, combined with the individualist temper of our public.

VANDALS IN MOSCOW

Whether the Soviet government agents were guilty of impiety and flagrant sacrilege in tearing down the Shrine of the Iberian Virgin at the gateway of the Red square in Moscow is, possibly, a point that concerns the adherents of the Russian church rather than the world at large. But the demolition invites general condemnation and contempt because of the crude stupidity of the act. As an exhibition of ignorant barbarism it was rather more pronounced in some respects than was the pillaging by even that eminent spiritual predecessor of the Red Gangsters, Attila the Hun. Whereas Attila plundered instinctively and in the heat of untutored enthusiasm, and without in the least comprehended the value of much that he and his followers ruined, the bolsheviks have proceeded coldly, deliberately, maliciously and with full knowledge of the enormity of their conduct from an artistic and historic standpoint.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—The Central Park Casino which Mayor Walker turned over to Sid. Solomon's corporation for the Delectation of the Dough Babies, is doing quite well, thank you.

They're grinding out a weekly profit of $6,000. The costroom and checking concession goes for $250 a night, while the car started pays the management $125 each evening for the privilege of starting the cars of the Starchy Archies.

The mayor knows his New York. The people that he took the Park Casino away from will step out next November and vote him back into office.

Low Fields used to poke Joe Weber in the eye and then put him on the cheek. "Mike," he'd say, "if I treat you cruel, it's because I love you!"

A BOOK AD — Jimmy Montgomery's last book, "The Virtue of This Job," is advertised in the New York newspapers as a "Book League of America Selection" in the following language:

"Meet Dick Swaine. To know Dick is to love him. He made a muck of his master, a harlot of his mistress, a bandit of himself. He loved and fought gloriously, while he lied and stole and cheated. If honor he had, little of virtue, none, blab, blab, blab."

As old Joe Howe once remarked: "When a woman finishes reading a book like that she's in no mood to get up in the morning, fry the old man's bacon and wipe the baby's nose."

Ain't it de TRUTH!

WHAT A FIGHT! — A ebook and suit salesman living in Washington Heights tells me he had read every word in every issue of the Saturday Evening Post since its inception. He says the only exercise he took in all that time was holding the magazine in both hands while he read it and turning the pages. Today his muscles are like those of the Village Blacksmith.

Two years ago he ran into a business crisis and stopped reading the magazine; but he still subscribes and has the books piled in the hall of his home ready to tackle them again when the occasion permits. Each week when a new issue arrives he unwraps it, lifts up the pile and carefully places the new volume on the bottom of the heap.

"I'm going to win this fight," he says, "if it's the last thing I do!"

THOSE DOTS — A New York columnist is in the habit of interspersing his sentences with mass of dots, like this:

A subscriber wrote to the editor the other day complaining that he wasn't getting his money's worth.

"I can't write a column," he said in his letter, "but I sure could knit prettier dots than this bird ever dreamed of. If drawing dots is all you have to do to be a columnist, I'm going to quit work and go in for the graft."

EDISON — Young Billy Huston of Seattle has been picked as the "new Edison."

Maybe so and maybe not. The test was largely along technical lines, nothing being mentioned about advertising ability, which, incidentally, happens to be Thomas E.'s long suit. As a newspaper reporter I "covered" the Wizard of Menlo Park for years. Any newspaper man who has dealt with Edison for an appreciable length of time—while not disparaging his genius—will also tell you that The Worthy Brother subscription agency—"Reputation is Reputation."

Think back over some of the exploitations Mr. Edison has had in years past—as a matter of fact is getting today in his hunt for a genius to succeed him—and figure it out for yourself.

The function of the reporter is to disentangle the main charm from the thick of particulars.

NEW REFORM: — New York theatre seats should be made wider. There is nothing more disconcerting than to sit through a play with the elbow of a strange woman—who could never be caught by a friend—resting gently but firmly over your liver.

RULES OF THE ROAD

Civic bodies are interested in having uniform traffic rules for the whole state. That is not enough. The time is more than ripe for the adoption of traffic rules which shall be nation-wide. One of the purposes of the federal government is to give us laws that will make relations between the states simple and pleasant and make travel through the states easy. The motorist has his hands very full at it is, without being up against a new set of rules in every city he enters.

CAMPS

This is the time of year when thousands of boys and girls from all over the land are at camp. Camps for boys and for girls are proving to be one of the finest developments of modern civilization for body-building and character-building. If you can afford even at great sacrifice to send your child to a camp for part of the summer you are likely to receive fine dividends on your sacrifices all the rest of your life. Life in the open, under sound direction and discipline, sets up the habit of clean thinking—and nothing is more important than that.

McGuffey's Readers

Hundreds of educators and students did well when they gathered not long ago at Oxford, Ohio, to pay honor to one who has had as much influence on the minds and characters of young Americans as any man who ever lived. This man was William McGuffey, who wrote the famous McGuffey's readers which most middle-aged and elderly folks who spent their younger years in this country, can never forget and never want to forget.

McGuffey's stories were not simply tales with a moral. They were frequently very practical lessons in

With more and more frequency similar scenes and things and places as well as about the grandeur of the world. And for pure entertainment which ever read anything more fascinating than "The Crazy Engineer."

NO STOPPING THEM

With more and more frequently men are called on to record the victories of women in the business and professional world and to recognize that there are few fields left exclusively to men. Take note that the other day Gertrude B. Battle Lane was elected to the vice presidency of one of the great publishing houses of the country. Women long ago were recognized for their skill. The new emphasis is on the executive type of mind.

AGREEMENT ON NAVAL PARITY SEEN AS TREMENDOUS STEP

By HENRY L. STIMSON

Secretary of State
(Henry Lewis Stimson was born at New York City, Sept. 21, 1867. He is a graduate of Yale university and Harvard Law school, being admitted to the bar in 1891. He joined a New York law firm in 1893. From 1906 to 1909 he was United States attorney general of the southern district of New York. He was the Republican candidate for governor in 1910 and served as secretary of war in the cabinet of President Taft from 1911 to 1913. In 1927 he was the special representative of the president in Nicaragua and later that year named governor general of the Philippines. He was appointed secretary of state by President Hoover last March.)

Agreement of naval parity for all categories of vessels by Great Britain and the United States is an immense and tremendous step forward.

At the Washington conference in 1921 Great Britain agreed to parity regarding capital ships and aircraft carriers. Now Premier MacDonald has said that Great Britain will adopt parity to all classes of vessels.

It may be futile in a military sense to aim to make two fleets equal. The difference alone in personnel of the crews which man the fleets would undoubtedly prevent two fleets from ever being mathematically equal in power.

But the doctrine in parity between the American and British fleets was not a military doctrine but one of statesmanship. It does not look to a future combat between these two fleets but has an exactly opposite purpose, namely to prevent those two navies from building against each other and to accomplish instead, a reduction of their respective naval power.

It thus represented an agreement that they should not regard each other as possible enemies in the step which potential enemies would take as the very first step against each other. This step is to try to outbuild the other fleet.

The doctrine of parity as thus used is supremely intelligent. In fact, it is the only doctrine by which two independent nations in the position occupied by Great Britain and America could agree to be friends and eliminate the thought of war between them.

This principle is now proposed to be extended and agreed to as the principle which should control the relations of the British and American navies, not only to capital ships, but cruisers and other categories of vessels which constitute those navies.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Baby must be taught early in life the lessons that will build his character and shape it beautifully at the same time that his little body is growing strong and fine. Habits are formed very early—they must be good habits or there will be much trouble later for both mother and baby.

Little children, from young babyhood on, learn easily by imitation. The actions of their parents influence them immeasurably. That is why every phase of the baby's environment must be kept helpful and beneficial. Smile at your baby often—let him hear you laugh and speak musically. His ears are sensitive and his vocal cords will learn to make the sound he hears.

A nervous mother usually means a nervous baby. Keep your child free from all contact with tension and disharmony. Don't encourage him to perform little stunts, if he is a precocious child who learns these tricks easily. Keep him quiet and let him develop these abilities normally. Carefully regulated habits, exercise, baths and massage are necessary, but many a baby has grown healthy and strong without any elaborate program of care along these lines. A simple, natural, quiet life is what a baby must have above everything.

Proper food and plenty of sleep are two sources of baby's beauty. He must eat the right food in the right amount and get plenty of rest and sleep. The younger he is the more sleep he needs. Keep a regular hour for his nap and see that his room is dark, reasonably quiet and well ventilated, without drafts. Sleeping outdoors in a carriage or on a sleeping porch is excellent for a baby. He should have plenty of fresh air and sunlight.

Mothers, fond as they are, must be indifferent to baby's eating whims. To force him or to coax him to eat is bad. But whatever diet has been determined upon as suited to a baby's needs at a given period of his development, should be adhered to strictly. Let him have his food at the proper intervals and take it away if he does not eat. Sooner or later he will accustom himself to the proper program. Regularity and routine are absolutely essential to baby's health and happiness. For his own good, as well as yours, you must insist upon them.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Diplomats are who voted for it frankly did so on the ground that, while they did not believe it would do any good, nevertheless did not see how it could do any harm.

The vital weakness which all recognized in it was its failure to renounce defensive warfare. Of course no nation can make a promise like that, but, at the same time, what nation ever admitted, in taking up arms, that it was doing so otherwise than in self-defense?

It was a weakness which Secretary Kellogg himself mentioned when Foreign Minister Briand, of France, originally proposed the treaty to him.

The former was not at all strong for it then. When the idea finally was sold to him he liked it so well that he gobbled most of the credit on his own account, but everybody seems to have forgotten that the state department openly considered it as a mere "holiday gesture" for quite awhile.

It is not so easy to re-stimulate peace confidence after the last war. Plenty of people who had imagined another large scale conflict impossible up to that time can still recall how, previously professed pacifists jumped into that struggle like the veriest jingoes. Naturally they are hard to convince that the diplomatic cynics are mistaken in predicting that the same thing would happen again.

The Kellogg pact assuredly was given the acid test before the senate approved it last spring. "Complete nothingness" was Senator Hiram Johnson's verdict on it, as he finally gave the treaty his support, and in one form or another, most of his fellow lawmakers echoed his words.

Complete nothingness cannot be very well injured anyone, but it can be over-advertised.

Plenty of Americans in public life—unsophisticated as Americans are supposed to be—certainly think the same thing.

The Kellogg pact was ratified by a big majority in the United States senate, but most of the senators

Broiled Steak
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Summer Squash, Mashed or Fried
Lettuce and Cabbage Salad
Banana Ice Cream

I would suggest that you cook the squash in salted water in the oven, as long as you are using it for the steak and potatoes, then mash it with seasoning. The recipe for frying is given in case you want to use it with this or some other menu.

Today's Recipes

Fried Summer Squash—Yellow squash, white summer squash are abundant on the market. Do not peel the squash. Cut in lengths an inch and a half thick. Cook in boiling, salted water until nearly tender. Drain and dip in flour. Season with salt and pepper. Fry slowly until both sides are a golden brown.

Banana Ice Cream — Procure three pints of heavy whipping cream. Take one quart of this and peel the squash. Cut in lengths an inch and a half thick. Cook in boiling, salted water until nearly tender. Drain and dip in flour. Season with salt and pepper. Fry slowly until both sides are a golden brown.

Many people have a tendency to tire of the same kind of ice cream over and over, and for a little afternoon or evening collation or a Sunday dinner the banana nut ice cream will provide a delightful change.

Suggestions

Canning Beans and Corn — In canning with beans and corn, both meats and vegetables, the addition of one tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice has proved highly successful. The vegetable is prepared and pre-cooked for a short time in an open kettle. The pre-cooked vegetable is filled as quickly as possible into sterilized jars. To each quart add one tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar and one teaspoon salt. Fill to overflowing with boiling water. Seal partly and process in boiling water, allowing the beans to remain in the water bath for 3½ hours and the corn for four hours. Complete seal, watch for leaks. Store in cool, dry place. A pinch of soda added before serving will counteract the acidity of flavor to which some persons object.

Cure Lagging Appetites — If fresh and wholesome food fails to arouse the family's hunger in hot weather, why not try dressing up the table? Dainty linens, delicate china, and glassware sparkling with cleanliness, will often do more to make food tempting than "a feast for the gods."

Get out the old family plate if you think it will make the table look more attractive. Use colored candles and a bowl of fresh flowers for decorations. But above all else, make sure that the tablecloth, raskins, dishes and silverware are spotlessly clean. Then, if the dish is good, all you will need to do is sit back comfortably and serve the extra portions.

Rolling Cracker Crumbs — An old paper put on the bread board before rolling cracker crumbs will save time and material. After the crackers have been crushed the paper may be lifted and every crumb shaken into the mixing bowl without the loss of any. This saving includes cleaning the bread board as well for it is difficult to keep from spilling some to the floor when the bread board is cleaned.

Practical Urinalysis (Part V)

Yesterday I told you how to make a simple test for sugar in the urine. I gave this test on the recommendation of three nationally known diabetes specialists—Dr. Allen, Dr. Elliott P. Joslin, and Dr. Russell M. Wilder. These doctors believe that the use of this test will disclose many diabetes cases in the early stages, when little damage is done, and then perhaps a simple regulation of the diet will be all that is necessary for treatment.

Today I am going to tell you how to make a simple test for albumin in the urine. I wouldn't give this albumin test if I hadn't given you the test for sugar, but it is easily performed and you can do it at the same time you do the sugar test. I have consulted a noted specialist on kidney troubles, Dr. Martin H. Lecher, as to the advisability of giving you this test, and he sees no objection. In fact, he thinks it will be helpful in detecting early kidney disorders, as the sugar test is in detecting diabetes.

If the test shows albumin, then I must go to your physician to have a complete urinalysis, microscopic and chemical, and a thorough examination to locate the trouble, and be advised as to treatment.

Significance of Albumin in the Urine. The normal urine contains no albumin. When albumin is found it is an evidence of some injury to the kidneys or some other part of the urinary tract. Blood and pus will give a positive test. (Women who have specimens of their urine examined should not collect it until the menstrual period is completely passed.) There are tests, microscopic and chemical, to decide whether the albumin comes from injury to the kidneys or elsewhere along the tract. (Considerable albumin may be present in the urine after hard athletic games. This is temporary, but those with kidney disease should not exercise strenuously.) (Fischer.)

The Heat and Acid Albumin Test. (For the albumin test the urine must be perfectly clear. If it is not clear, you can filter through a filter paper placed in a small funnel. If it is still not clear, place a teaspoon of pure talcum powder or powdered charcoal in the funnel and again filter.)

Put about a teaspoon of the clear urine in a test tube and place this in a small dish containing about one and one-half cups of warm or cold water. Put on stove until the water in the pan boils about five minutes.

(Put the same amount of clear urine in another test tube and set aside as a control.)

After the five minutes are up, remove tube from the pan, and hold side by side with the control tube, for comparison. Hold it about two feet away against a dark background.

If the boiled urine is cloudy it may be due to two things: first, albumin (cooked and so visible), which is abnormal; or, second, to simple phosphates (which are normal). To determine which it is, drop two or three drops of white vinegar into the tube. If the cloud is due to the phosphates, it will disappear. If it is due to albumin, it will not disappear.

I shall be interested to know if you find you have sugar or albumin in your urine when you didn't suspect it for I shall realize you have in most cases found it in time to prevent serious damage. But please do not ask me to interpret your findings. You must see your personal physician who will have more complete tests made and give you the proper treatment.

"It is not modern thought that troubles me," says one, "but modern want of thought."

Very true. And it's not at all a modern ailment. It's as old as men and women. How often do we excuse ourselves by the words, "I didn't think."

Or maybe we do think and we think thoughts that don't help. We think we're abused instead of blessed. We think about the mean traits of those with whom we are associated, not of their good points.

A girl of 21 writes me how unhappy she is at home. Her mother continually finds fault with her, while her older sister does as she pleases. She doesn't sign any name to her letter, but she will recognize it as hers, I am sure.

You're of age, so why not leave home for a time and try being on your own if it possibly can be done? Nothing so gives one the proper perspective on home conditions than living among strangers for awhile. Your mother may be able to appreciate you more if she has to do without you for awhile and you may miss the home atmosphere so much you will be less likely to think you are being discriminated against. It's a great pity when a mother allows one child more privileges than another, making one the goat, so to speak. And in these days of independence a girl has to put up with "treatments" she thinks is cruel. As to the blame, I would not know where to place it without seeing you in your home and observing your actions and those of your mother.

B. P.: According to doctor's weight chart you should weigh 132 pounds, so you are not overweight. In respect to the young man who is to visit you soon, I will give you fairly by so doing.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

WHY QUEENS LEAVE HOME

A bee flew up to the largest cell in the wall. Another flew to the cell next to it. Then the wall seemed alive with bees. Where had they come from? What were they doing? Peter, fascinated, watched them. His eyes grew round as the little saucer before him. He caught his breath. Surprise held him spellbound. The bees were actually opening the doors of the cells and thrusting something into them, then hastily closing the doors and flying to other cells, the doors of which had not been opened. So fast they worked that it seemed to fly round and round in circles. The moving masses made Peter dizzy.

At last curiosity got the better of Peter as curiosity always did sooner or later, and he could hold back his questions no longer. He turned to the Queen.

"What are those bees doing, Your Majesty?" demanded Peter. "I have been watching them closely, but they are so quick I can't make out quite what they are up to." The Queen chuckled. "I don't wonder," said she. "It would be hard for an one who did not know our customs to solve the puzzle. As bright eyes as yours have tried before this, and failed. Those bees you see are the Nurse bees and they are feeding our babies. In those narrow cells are the grubs who are going to come into the world as workers—they receive a dinner of bread. The grubs in those great round cells will be born Queens—rulers to the last hair on their bodies. The nurses are providing them with the daintiest of foods. "Queen Bees!" exclaimed Peter. "Why do you raise more Queens? Why do you want such them?" You rule wisely and well and your people love you. You mean princesses, don't you? Won't the babies be little. I thought a Queen had to be quite grown up!"

"You don't know a thing about us, do you?" The Queen smiled upon Peter, a little sadly the boy thought.

"Yes, I'm true, my subjects love me now, at last most of them do, but as in every other nation under the sun there are some of them who long for a change in government and a new ruler. And it is up to me to give my people what they want if it is good for them. So when the new queens come, I shall slip away. Those who really love me will follow me. The others will stay behind and swear allegiance to the new Queen. For there can be but one queen at a time in a hive!"

"But where will you go if you leave home, dear Queen?" asked Peter, anxiously. He feared for his royal friend's safety.

"I shall start a new kingdom, of course," declared the Queen. "And I shall rule over it until the time comes to do the same thing I have done again."

This time Peter was sure he saw a tear in Her Majesty's eye. But being a mere boy he didn't know what to say that might comfort her. So he kept a sympathetic silence.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BETTER THAN THE BIRDS—Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?—Matthew 6:26.

THIS PROHIBITION

Mr. Upton Sinclair, writing in Le Mond, Paris, expresses his regret that that paper seems to have been misled by erroneous reports as to the operation of prohibition in America, and further says:

"The prohibition laws, even badly enforced as they are, have been of enormous benefit to the United States. They have raised the price of alcohol so that the worker cannot get it easily, and this is the main cause of the prosperity now enjoyed by the more highly paid workers in this country. It is also the cause of our industrial productivity which breaks all records. I doubt if the alcohol drunk in America today is one-tenth of that drunk before prohibition. I heard recently a remark by the chief of police of the city of Denver, which sums up the situation perfectly: 'The stuff comes in in Ford automobiles where previously it used to come by the freight car load.'

"I don't think I have seen a drunken man in California in three or four years, and I don't think I have seen more than two or three in ten years. I saw two or three upon a recent visit of two months in New York City. In the old days I would have seen hundreds in the same period of time.

"As to crime, a great deal of it is the crime of selling liquor and naturally that has increased with prohibition, since prior to prohibition it was no crime to sell liquor. There are many causes of crime in the United States—our great inequality of wealth, and unemployment, combined with the individualist temper of our public.

VANDALS IN MOSCOW

Whether the Soviet government agents were guilty of impiety and flagrant sacrilege in tearing down the Shrine of the Iberian Virgin at the gateway of the Red square in Moscow is, possibly, a point that concerns the adherents of the Russian church rather than the world at large. But the demolition invites general condemnation and contempt because of the crude stupidity of the act. As an exhibition of ignorant barbarism it was rather more pronounced in some respects than was the pillaging by even that eminent spiritual predecessor of the Red Gangsters, Attila the Hun. Whereas Attila plundered instinctively and in the heat of untutored enthusiasm, and without in the least comprehended the value of much that he and his followers ruined, the bolsheviks have proceeded coldly, deliberately, maliciously and with full knowledge of the enormity of their conduct from an artistic and historic standpoint.

NEW YORK—The Central Park Casino which Mayor Walker turned over to Sid. Solomon's corporation for the Delectation of the Dough Babies, is doing quite well, thank you.

They're grinding out a weekly profit of $8,000. The costroom and checking concession goes for $250 a night, while the car started pays the management $125 each evening for the privilege of starting the cars of the Starchy Archies.

The mayor knows his New York. The people that he took the Park Casino away from will step out next November and vote him back into office.

Low Fields used to poke Joe Weber in the eye and then pat him on the cheek: "Mike," he'd say, "if I treat you cruel, it's because I love you."

A BOOK AD

Jimmy Montgomery's last book, "The Virtue of This Jest," is advertised in the New York newspapers as a "Book League of America Selection" in the following language: "Meet Dick Swaine. To know Dick is to love him. He made a ruckus of his master, a baron of his mistress, a bandit of himself. He loved and fought gloriously, while he lied and stole and cheated. Of honor he had little, of virtue none, blab, blab, blab."

As old Ed Howe once remarked: "When a woman finishes reading a book like that she's in no mood to get up in the morning fry the old man's bacon and wipe the baby's nose."

RULES OF THE ROAD

Civic bodies are interested in having uniform traffic rules for the whole state. That is not enough. The time is more than ripe for the adoption of traffic rules which shall be nation-wide. One of the purposes of the federal government is to give us laws that will make relations between the states simple and pleasant and make travel through the states easy. The motorist has his hands very full at it is, without being up against a new set of rules in every city he enters.

CAMPS

This is the time of year when thousands of boys and girls from all over the land are at camp. Camps for boys and for girls are proving to be one of the finest developments of modern civilization for body-building and character-building. If you can afford even at great sacrifice to send your child to a camp for part of the summer you are likely to receive fine dividends on your sacrifices all the rest of your life. Life in the open, under sound direction and discipline, sets up the habit of clean thinking—and nothing is more important than that.

McGuffey's Readers

Hundreds of educators and students did well when they gathered not long ago at Oxford, Ohio, to pay honor to one who has had as much influence on the minds and characters of young Americans as any man who ever lived. This man was William McGuffey, who wrote the famous McGuffey's readers which most middle-aged and elderly folks, who spent their younger years in this country, can never forget and never want to forget.

McGuffey's stories were not simply tales with a moral. They were frequently very practical lessons in life. With more frequency similar scenes and things and places as well as about the grandeur of the world. And for pure entertainment who ever read anything more fascinating than "The Crazy Engineer"

NO STOPPING THEM

With more and more frequently men are called on to record the victories of women in the business and professional world and to recognize that there are few fields left exclusively to men. Take note that the other day Gertrude Battles Lane was elected to the vice presidency of one of the great publishing houses of the country. Women long ago were recognized for their skill. The new emphasis is on the executive type of mind.

AGREEMENT ON NAVAL PARITY SEEN AS TREMENDOUS STEP

By HENRY L. STIMSON

Secretary of State (Henry Lewis Stimson was born at New York City, Sept. 21, 1867. He is a graduate of Yale university and Harvard Law school, being admitted to the bar in 1891. He joined a New York law firm in 1892. From 1906 to 1909 he was United States attorney general of the southern district of New York. He was the Republican candidate for governor in 1910 and served as secretary of war in the cabinet of President Taft from 1911 to 1913. In 1927 he was the special representative of the president in Nicaragua and later that year was named governor general of the Philippines. He was appointed secretary of state by President Hoover last March.)

Agreement of naval parity for all categories of vessels by Great Britain and the United States is an immense and tremendous step forward.

At the Washington conference in 1921 Great Britain agreed to parity regarding capital ships and aircraft carriers. Now Premier MacDonald has said that Great Britain will adopt parity to all classes of vessels.

It may be futile in a military sense to aim to make two fleets equal. The difference alone in personnel of the crews which man the fleets would undoubtedly prevent two fleets from ever being mathematically equal in power.

But the doctrine in parity between the American and British fleets was not a military doctrine but one of statesmanship. It does not look to a future combat between these two fleets but has an exactly opposite purpose, namely to prevent those two navies from building against each other and to accomplish instead, a reduction of their respective naval power.

It thus represented an agreement that they should not regard each other as possible enemies in that they agreed not to take the step which potential enemies would take as the very first step against each other. This step is to try to outbuild the other fleet.

The doctrine of parity as thus used is supremely intelligent. In fact, it is the only doctrine by which two independent nations in the position occupied by Great Britain and America could agree to be friends and eliminate the threat of war between them.

This principle is now proposed to be extended and turned to as the principle which should control the relations of the British and Americans navies, not only as to capital ships, but cruisers and other categories of vessels which constitute those navies.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Baby must be taught early in life the lessons that will build his character and shape it beautifully at the same time that his little body is growing strong and fine. Habits are formed very early—they must be good habits or there will be much trouble later for both mother and baby.

Little children, from young babyhood on, learn easily by imitation. The actions of their parents influence them immeasurably. That is why every phase of the baby's environment must be kept helpful and beneficial. Smile at your baby often—let him hear you laugh and speak musically. His ears are sensitive and his vocal cords will learn to make the sound he hears.

A nervous mother usually means a nervous baby. Keep your child free from all contact with tension and disharmony. Don't encourage him to perform little stunts, if he is a precocious child who learns these tricks easily. Keep him quiet and let him develop these abilities normally. Carefully regulated habits, exercise, baths and massage are necessary. But many a baby has grown healthy and strong without any elaborate program of care along these lines. A simple, natural, quiet life is what a baby must have above everything.

Proper food and plenty of sleep are two sources of baby's beauty. He must eat the right food in the right amount and get plenty of rest and sleep. The younger he is the more sleep he needs. But whatever diet has been determined upon as suited to a baby's needs at a given period of his development, should be adhered to strictly. Let him have his food at the proper intervals and take it away if he does not eat. Sooner or later he will accustom himself to the proper program. WASHINGTON—Diplomats are a cynical gang.

Not Americans, to be sure. But we have no diplomats, in the opinion of the suave, hard-boiled gentry who represent the older world's powers in Washington.

Of the 41 of these latter who attended the Kellogg peace pact's recent "promulgation"—as the ceremony was called—I doubt if there was one who entered the White House east room without a sly grin hidden behind his hand.

War really outlawed? Senator Borah may believe so. Ex-Secretary of State Kellogg, maybe. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, of England, as a laborite and altruist, quite likely. And perhaps President Hoover has his hopes.

But those professional old con-buffers from overseas? Tell it to Sweeney, so far as they are concerned!

From each embassy and legation in the capital, if desired, a beautiful expression might be had of that particular foreign headquarters' faith in a brighter, happier international future, by virtue of the Kellogg pact.

However, if you are well acquainted at a few of them, drop in and get an earful of their honest-to-goodness personal views.

The present generation is dead sick of war. It is practically a world-wide feeling, because practically the whole world got a tremendous overdose of it in 1914-18. To the present generation, then, the treaty means something.

But wait until the rising generation reaches fighting age!

Unquestionably this is overwhelmingly the trend of opinion among the diplomats who sat, seemingly so seriously, through the peace ceremony at the White House not many days ago.

Plenty of Americans in public life—unsophisticated as Americans are supposed to be—certainly think the same thing.

Or maybe we do think and we think thoughts that don't help. We think we're abused instead of blessed. We think about the mean traits of those with whom we are associated, not of their good points.

A girl of 21 writes me how unhappy she is at home. Her mother continually finds fault with her, while her older sister does as she pleases. She doesn't sign any name to her letter, but she will recognize it as hers. I am sure.

You're of age, so why not leave home for a time and try being on your own if it possibly can be done? Nothing so gives one the proper perspective on home conditions than living among strangers for awhile. Your mother may be able to appreciate you more if she has to do without you for awhile and you may miss the home atmosphere so much you will be less likely to think you are being discriminated against. It's a great pity when a mother allows one child more privileges than another, making one the goat, so to speak. And in these days of independence no girl has to put up with treatment she thinks is cruel. As to the blame, I would not know where to place it without seeing you in your home and observing your actions and those of your mother.

B. P.: According to doctor's weight chart you should weigh 132 pounds, so you are not overweight. In respect to the young man who is to visit you soon, I will give you the advice one young girl I know gave another whose lover did not come to the point: "Get him in the moonlight, old kid, get him in the moonlight." And don't be cold. Give him a chance to see that you like him. Good luck to you.

LONGER. Is just another little girl whose people won't let her have boy friends. Just be patient little girl, and they will find that you are growing up and give you more freedom, and try to think how nice it is you have a family who loves you. Some day, when you are a married woman, you will think about the time you were a home with your brothers and sisters, and you will think how happy you were then and what a lot of fun you had. As to the boy friend (?) who tore up your picture, unless you are a married woman, you will think about the time you were a home with your brothers and sisters, and you will think how happy you were then and what a lot of fun you had. As to the boy friend (?) who tore up your picture, unless you are a married woman, you will think about the time you were a home with your brothers and sisters, and you will think how happy you were then and what a lot of fun you had.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl 18, and two years ago I went with a fellow five years my senior. I liked him for awhile but soon grew tired of going with him, so we quit. He didn't want to go with me and he came back and wanted to make up, but as I was going with another fellow I refused to do so. Now about two weeks ago I met him and he wants to go with me, but he still goes with another girl. He doesn't want to go steady with me. He says if we would go steady we would only quit again, but I feel differently toward him now. How could I regain his love for me?"

"G. E. O." Now you think you can't have him you want him. That is it, G. E. O. The only thing you can do is to go with him when he asks you and try to be so sweet that he will want to go with you alone, if you feel you are treating the other girl fairly by so doing.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

WHY QUEENS LEAVE HOME

A bee flew up to the largest cell in the wall. Another flew to the cell next to it. Then the wall seemed alive with bees. Where had they come from? What were they doing? Peter, fascinated, watched them. His eyes grew round as the little saucer before him. He caught his breath. Surprise held him spellbound. The bees were actually opening the doors of the cells and thrusting something into them, then hastily closing the door and flying to other cells, the doors of which had not been opened. So fast they worked that they seemed to fly round and round in circles. The moving masses made Peter dizzy.

At last curiosity got the better of Peter as curiosity always did. He turned to the Queen.

"What are those bees doing, Your Majesty?" demanded Peter. "I have been watching them closely, but they are so quick I can't make out quite what they are up to." The Queen chuckled.

"I don't wonder," said she. "It would be hard for an one who did not know our customs to solve the puzzle. As bright eyes as yours have tried before this, and failed. Those bees you see are the Nurse bees and they are feeding our babies. In those narrow cells are the grubs who are going to come into the world as workers—they receive a dinner of bread. The grubs in those great round cells will be born Queens—rulers to the last hair on their bodies. The nurses are providing them with the daintiest of foods. "Queen Bees!" exclaimed Peter. "Why do you raise more Queens? What do you want with them? You rule wisely and well and your people love you. You mean princesses, don't you? Won't the babies be little. I thought a Queen had to be quite grown up."

"You don't know a thing about us, do you?" The Queen smiled upon Peter, a little sadly the boy thought.

"Yes, 'tis true, my subjects love me now, at last most of them do, but as in every other nation under the sun there are some of them who long for a change in government and a new ruler. And it is up to me to give my people what they want if it is good for them. So when the new Queens come, I shall slip away. Those who really love me will follow me. The others will stay behind and swear allegiance to the new Queen. For there can be but one queen at a time in a hive!"

"But where will you go if you leave home, dear Queen?" asked Peter, anxiously. He feared for his royal friend's safety.

"I shall start a new kingdom, of course," declared the Queen. "And I shall rule over it until the time comes to do the same thing all over again."

This time Peter was sure he saw a tear in Her Majesty's eye. But being a mere boy he didn't know what to say that might comfort her. So he kept a sympathetic silence.

There has been a lot of discussion in harness horse racing circles regarding excessive scoring and solutions for the same.

One racing man who does some driving himself and is also secretary of a county fair had the same problem of excessive scoring confronting him but believes he overcame the condition.

It is the opinion of this secretary-driver that the officers in charge of a race meeting should give their starting judge their full support in any action that he may deem necessary to obtain control, if he imposes fines, suspensions or sends a horse to the barn, they should back him up and not reverse his decisions for any personal reasons.

It is suggested that the starting judge be instructed that three scores is the limit and outlaws and drivers who intentionally spoil a score should be sent to the barn. The result will be fewer outlaws, fewer unruly drivers and less scoring.

To quote the driver in question: "As it is today, you cannot blame the driver for getting away with all that he can when he knows the judge in the stand is just bluffing and is afraid to act for fear of hurting some one's feelings. I impress upon the starting judge that he is employed to please the grand stand and not the drivers."

"To prove this method the first day of our racing last year the average scores were five to a heat. The last four days the average was only two, and it was simply brought about by telling our starting judge what we expected and assuring him that whatever he did would receive our full support."

An example of the effectiveness of this plan was furnished in the opening heat of the 2:14 trot, first event on Thursday's racing card at the fair, when Starter A. E. Staup finally imposed a $25 fine on Dr. Hugh M. Parshall for consistently ignoring his warnings not to score ahead of the pole horse.

The penalty was the first imposed since the race officials assured Staup that they would back up his efforts to show drivers just where the authority lay. After that the drivers were more careful to obey Staup's instructions and there was a minimum amount of delay in running off the long card.

case of stomach trouble. Food simply refused to digest. Gas formed, my heart palpitated, and my breath came in short gasps. Even my complexion was bad. "A friend urged me to try Konjola, which I did. Quickly and surely this new medicine relieved me of long standing suffering. Today I can eat three hearty meals a day, secure in the knowledge that I will not suffer afterward. My complexion is much better, and I have been greatly benefited in every way. I endorse Konjola with all my heart and soul, for it really is a wonderful medicine."

LOCKE BUNTER WINS TROTTERING CUP FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS

Straight Heats Decide Three Events On Fair Program

Straight heat victories marked three of the four races which comprised the second day's card of the three-day Southwestern Ohio Shortship Circuit meeting at the Greene County Fair Thursday afternoon.

The three-year-old trotting stake for a $500 purse and The Lula Faye Dining Room loving cup, feature offering of the card and third event on the program, was won in straight heats by Locke Bunter, blk. s., by The Bunter, owned by E. W. Pitkin, Mt. Vernon, O., and driven by Beaman. In each heat the winner scored perfectly, got away flying and won without trouble.

Sybil Volo, br. m., by Peter Volo, owned by J. G. Cooper, Cincinnati, brother of Governor Myers, N. Y., and driven by Al Crooks, Carthage, O., defeated a field of thirteen horses to win the 2:14 trot, valued at $400, opening event of the afternoon. The winner was much the best of the field and came from behind each time to win with something to spare.

The 2:14 pace, worth $400, third event on the card, was a split heat in which Patchen Boy, b. g., by Baron Chan, driven by Carl, owned by L. E. Greer, Newark, O., won the first and third heats and consequently the race.

In the second heat, however, Greer's entry was beaten by Minnie Chan in a driving finish.

Patchen Boy also recorded the fastest time of the day in winning the first heat in 2:08 3/4, which, however, did not even approach the track record. This event witnessed the collapse of the favorite, Julia June, owned by Dr. E. P. Clement, Elyria, vice president of the Harness Horse Association, which only recently established a mark of 2:01 3/4 and ruled a heavy choice over the field of eight pacers.

Julia June finished second in both the first and third heats and fourth in the middle brush.

The Urbana reinsman, Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, was again in the limelight in the final event on the program when Ben Direct, b. c., by Binville, with Parshall himself up, accounted for the green pace, carrying a $200 purse, in which horses that had previously won less than $100 were eligible to compete.

Dr. Parshall drove his pacer to victory in straight heats with Easter Patch, which finished second twice, and fourth once, furnishing most of the competition.

HARNESS CIGARS BEAT CENTRAL HIGH IN NATIONAL LOOP GAME

Harness Cigars resumed their winning ways, registering an 8 to 4 victory at the expense of the last place Central High School nine in a National League softball game Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Wasting only two of their ten hits, the winners tallied three runs in the first inning and two in the second, a sufficient number to win as it afterward proved. Harness added another run in the fourth, one in the fifth and a final marker in the eighth.

Leopard, Harness pitcher, experienced only one bad inning, the fifth, when the Bucs clustered five hits to score all of their four runs.

NOTES ON COUNTY FAIR RACES

Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, Urbana reinsman, tried the patience of Starter A. E. Staup a little too far in the first heat of the 2:14 trot, opening event on the racing card Thursday, and as a result drew the first $25 fine imposed by Staup since the meet opened. Parshall repeatedly ignored warnings not to score ahead of the pole horse with Miss Marian Todler, which had drawn sixth or the outside position in the first tier. In the succeeding heats drivers followed out the plan that discretion is the better part of valor.

One event scheduled on the racing card did not materialize. It had been arranged that Romohr should drive an exhibition mile with Tom Corwin, b. g., by Oliver Evans, owned by D. W. Bishop, Lebanon, in an effort to beat 2:30 and give the horse a mark. Under the rules, however, such exhibitions must be given before the regular races begin and as this technical point was overlooked the event had to be called off.

The track was again all that could be desired Thursday but it was almost too warm for comfort and fans who jammed the grandstand to overflowing seemed to lose interest in the program because of its length. It required nearly five hours to complete the card, which comprised twelve heats. The racing started shortly after 1:30 but toward the end spectators began to think of the evening meal and the grandstand was nearly empty by the time the final heat was run at 6:30.

The showing of the one-time sensational trotter, Missing Wonder, in the 2:14 trot, was a distinct disappointment to local fans. The horse is owned by William Irwin, Lebanon, and trained and driven by Joe Hagler, Xenia. There was a time not long ago when Missing Wonder was a real stepper but this season the horse has not rounded into form and in the opening event Thursday was drawn after finishing twelfth and eleventh the first two heats in a field of thirteen.

Helping to pass the time away, between heats the New Burlington Community Band furnished music and Barnard's Circus put on various acts that aided in keeping the crowd in good spirits.

MIDDLETOWN NINE TO PLAY HERE

A REAL TREAT is in store for Xenia softball fans Friday night when the softball team representing Middletown Post, American Legion, appears at Cox Memorial Athletic Field for an exhibition game with the Harness Cigars. The game is scheduled for 6 o'clock.

Fans will have their first chance to glimpse the sport as it is played by teams in other cities besides Xenia.

Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champions, at present in second place in the National League, is expected to give the Legion nine keen competition.

The Middle team, said to be one of the strongest in this section of the state, has played leading teams in all parts of Ohio this season.

There has been a lot of discussion in harness racing circles regarding excessive scoring and solutions for the same.

One racing man who does some driving himself and is also secretary of a county fair had the same problem of excessive scoring confronting him but believes he overcame the condition.

It is the opinion of this secretary-driver that the officers in charge of a race meeting should give their starting judge their full support in any action that he may deem necessary to obtain control of his field. If he imposes fines, suspensions or sends a horse to the barn, they should back him up and not reverse his decisions for any personal reasons.

It is suggested that the starting judge be instructed that three scores is the limit and outlaws and drivers who intentionally spoil a score should be sent to the barn. The result will be fewer outlaws, fewer unruly drivers and less scoring.

To quote the driver in question: "As it is today, you cannot blame the driver for getting away with all that he can when he knows the judge in the stand is just bluffing and is afraid to act for fear of hurting some one's feelings. Impressing upon the starting judge that he is employed to please the grand stand and not the drivers."

"To prove this method the first day of our racing last year the average scores were five to a heat. The last four days the average was only two, and it was simply brought about by telling our starting judge what we expected and assuring him that whatever he did would receive our full support."

An example of the effectiveness of this plan was furnished in the opening heat of the 2:14 trot first event on Thursday's racing card at the fair, when Starter A. E. Staup finally imposed a $25 fine on Dr. Hugh M. Marshall for consistently ignoring his warnings not to score ahead of the pole horse.

The penalty was the first imposed since the meeting began and the race officials assured Staup that they would back up his efforts to show drivers just where the authority lay. After that the drivers were more careful to obey Staup's instructions and there was a minimum amount of delay in running off the long card.

"IT WAS KONJOLA THAT TRIUMPHED; OTHERS FAILED!"

"Quickly And Surely New Medicine Relieved Me Of Long-Standing Stomach Trouble," Says Grateful Man.

case of stomach trouble. Food simply refused to digest. Gas formed, my heart palpitated, and my breath came in short gasps. Even my complexion was bad. "A friend urged me to try Konjola, which I did. Quickly and surely this new medicine relieved me of long standing suffering. Today I can eat three hearty meals a day, secure in the knowledge that I will not suffer afterward. My complexion is much better, and I have been greatly benefited in every way. I endorse Konjola with all my heart and soul, for it really is a wonderful medicine."

LOCKE BUNTER WINS TROTTER CUP FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS

Straight Heats Decide Three Events On Fair Program

Straight heat victories marked three of the four races which comprised the second day's card of the three-day Southwestern Ohio Shortship Circuit meeting at the Greene County Fair Thursday afternoon.

The three-year-old trotting stake for a $500 purse and The Lula Faye Dining Room loving cup, feature offering of the card and third event on the program, was won in straight heats by Locke Bunter, blk. s., by The Bunter, owned by W. Pirkins, Mt. Vernon, O., and driven by Beaman. In each heat the winner scored perfectly, got away flying and won without trouble.

Sybil Volo, br. m. by Peter Volo, owned by J. G. Cooper, Cincinnati, brother of Governor Myers V. Cooper, and driven by Al Crooks, Carthage, O., defeated a field of thirteen horses to win the 2:14 trot, valued at $400, opening event of the afternoon. The winner was much the best of the field and came from behind each time to win with something to spare.

The 2:14 pace, worth $400, third event on the card, was a split heat contest in which Patchen Boy, b. c., by Baron Chan, driven by Carl, owned by L. E. Greer, Newark, O., won the first and third heats and consequently the race. In the second heat, however, Greer's entry was beaten by Minnie Chan in a driving finish.

Patchen Boy also recorded the fastest time of the day in winning the first heat in 2:08 3/4, which, however, did not even approach the track record. This event witnessed the collapse of the favorite, Julia June, owned by Dr. E. P. Clement, Elyria, vice president of the Harness Horse Association, which only recently established a mark of 2:01 3/4 and ruled a heavy choice over the field of eight pacers. Julia June finished second in both the first and third heats and fourth in the middle brush.

The Urbana reinsman, Dr. Hugh M. Marshall, was again in the limelight in the final event on the program when Ben Direct, b. c., by Blinville, with Marshall himself up, accounted for the green pace, carrying a $200 purse, in which horses that had previously won less than $100 were eligible to compete.

Dr. Marshall drove his pacer to victory in straight heats with Easter Patch, which finished second twice and fourth once, furnishing most of the competition.

HARNESS CIGARS BEAT CENTRAL HIGH IN NATIONAL LOOP GAME

Harness Cigars resumed their winning ways, registering an 8 to 4 victory at the expense of the last place Central High School nine in a National League softball game Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Wasting only two of their ten hits, the winners tallied three runs in the first inning and two in the second, a sufficient number to win as it afterward proved. Harness added another run in the fourth, one in the fifth and a final marker in the eighth.

Leopard, Harness pitcher, experienced only one bad inning, the fifth, when the Bucs clustered five hits to score all of their four runs.

NOTES ON COUNTY FAIR RACES

Dr. Hugh M. Marshall, Urbana reinsman, tried the patience of Starter A. E. Staup a little too far in the first heat of the 2:14 trot, opening event on the racing card Thursday, and as a result drew the first $25 fine imposed by Staup since the meet opened. Marshall repeatedly ignored warnings not to score ahead of the pole horse with Miss Marian Todler, which had drawn sixth or the outside position in the first tier. In the succeeding heats drivers followed out the plan that discretion is the better part of valor.

One event scheduled on the racing card did not materialize. It had been arranged that Romohr should drive an exhibition mile with Tom Corwin, b. g., by Oliver Evans, owned by D. W. Bishop, Lebanon, in an effort to beat 2:30 and give the horse a mark. Under the rules, however, such exhibitions must be given before the regular races begin and as this technical point was overlooked the event had to be called off.

The track was again all that could be desired Thursday but it was almost too warm for comfort and fans who jammed the grandstand to overflowing seemed to lose interest in the program because of its length. It required nearly five hours to complete a card, which comprised twelve heats. The racing started shortly after 1:30 but toward the end spectators began to think of the evening meal and the grandstand was nearly empty by the time the final heat was run at 6:30.

The showing of the one-time sensational trotter, Missing Wonder, in the 2:14 trot, was a distinct disappointment to local fans. The horse is owned by William Irwin, Lebanon, and trained and driven by Joe Hagler, Xenia. There was a time not long ago when Missing Wonder was a real stepper but this season the horse has not rounded into form and in the opening event Thursday was drawn after finishing twelfth and eleventh the first two heats in a field of thirteen.

Helping to pass the time away, between heats the New Burlington Community Band furnished music and Barnard's Circus put on various acts that aided in keeping the crowd in good spirits.

MIDDLETOWN NINE TO PLAY HERE

A REAL TREAT is in store Friday night when the softball team representing Middletown Post, American Legion, appears at Cox Memorial Athletic Field for an exhibition game with the Harness Cigars. The game is scheduled for 6 o'clock.

Fans will have their first chance to glimpse the sport as it is played by teams in other cities besides Xenia.

Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champions, at present in second place in the National League, is expected to give the Legion nine keen competition.

The Middle team, said to be one of the strongest in this section of the state, has played leading teams in all parts of Ohio this season.

Dave Evans, noted auto racer, has forsaken the wheel of racing mounts for the gentler pastime of promoting auto races. As head of a new syndicate Evans now operates a board track speedway at Woodbridge, N. J.

GLENN REED QUILTS POSITION IN XENIA

R. Glenn Reed, for the past ten years assistant funeral director and embalmer at the J. H. Whitmer Funeral Parlor, has resigned to become associated with the Dayton Casket and Cabinet Co. He will travel for that concern in the eastern part of the state and his wife and child will join him when he becomes located in eastern Ohio. His resignation takes effect September 15 and his successor has not been announced.

AGED FIRE CHIEF
SCORNS GOLFING

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—Fire Chief George A. Wallace, oldest active fire chief in the country, would like to know just what the fire-fighting business is coming to.

Years ago firemen pitched horse shoes for exercise, played pinocle and poker for amusement, and spit tobacco juice on the engine house floor—well, for no reason at all.

Now they chew gum and play golf.

The metamorphosis of the blue clad fire fighter to a nattily attired golfer was discovered by the aged chief when he heard Fire Lieut. George Witly announce a fire department golf tournament to be staged in September.

"Golf," the eighty-one-year-old chief snorted. "An old man's game. I'll start playing after I reach 100."

More than 300 members of the fire department are active golfers, Lieut. Witly declares. He expects at least 150 of them to enter the tournament, which will be held at the Ridgewood Course.

THE hall needs a new rug. More towels are needed for the bath room, and the kitchen floor could certainly stand a coat of paint. The children need shoes. The car will soon need tires. Well, we buy a hundred new things every year.

Scattered throughout the United States are manufacturers who make the very things we need. Their products are on sale in certain stores within easy reach. Certain of these products, and certain of these stores, are especially fitted to take care of our special need. But which products and which stores? Which can we afford, and which do we think is best? We must look to advertising for advice.

Advertising is the straight line between supply and demand. It saves time spent in haphazard shopping. It leads you directly to your goal. By reading the advertisements, we can determine in advance where the best values are to be found. With the aid of advertising, shopping becomes a simple and pleasant business, and budget figures bring more smiles than frowns.

AGED FIRE CHIEF
SCORNS GOLFING

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—Fire Chief George A. Wallace, oldest active fire chief in the country, would like to know just what the fire-fighting business is coming to.

Years ago firemen pitched horse shoes for exercise, played pinochle and poker for amusement, and spit tobacco juice on the engine house floor—well, for no reason at all.

Now they chew gum and play golf.

The metamorphosis of the blue-clad fire fighter to a nattily attired golfer was discovered by the aged chief when he heard Fire Lieut. George Witte announce a fire department golf tournament to be staged in September.

"Golf," the eighty-one-year-old chief snorted. "An old man's game. I'll start playing after I reach 100."

More than 300 members of the fire department are active golfers, Lieut. Witte declares. He expects at least 150 of them to enter the tournament, which will be held at the Ridgewood Course.

business district of Xenia has been raised from fifteen to twenty miles

Power flows to the man who knows how.

The Church Invites You

Ex-president Coolidge says, "The mere sharpening of wits, the bare training of the intellect, the naked acquisition of science, while they would greatly improve the power for good, likewise increase the power for evil."

"An intellectual growth will only add to our confusion, unless it is accompanied by a moral growth. I do not know of any source of moral power other than that which comes from religion."

tion and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

(On the Sunday School lesson,
The Return from Captivity, Ezra
1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6 for Sunday,
August 18th.)

A new day arrives for the Israelites as Cyrus, the new Persian king is divinely influenced to arrange for the return of the exiles at Jerusalem. God had a plan for the developing of his people and his plan succeeded; He proceeds by using men. Without Him we can do nothing.

Vs. 2, 3. "Then was our mouth
filled with laughter and our tongue with singing; then said
they among the nations, Jehovah
hath done great things for us
whereof we are glad." "God loves
the singing and laughter of the saints. Trust and wait! The memory of your present anguish will soon be forgotten in tumults of joy." F. B. Meyer.

Vs. 5, 6. "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy; he that goeth forth and weepeth bearing seed for sowing shall doubtless come again with joy bringing his sheaves with him." The more toilsome the sowing,
the more delightful the harvest.
So it is with all human experiences.

Discussion on Questions on S.S. Lesson

On the Sunday School Lesson,
The Return from Captivity, Ezra
1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6 for Sunday,
August 18.

1. Give some account of Babylon and its place in this ancient history.

2. What facts in this lesson form the basis for faith in divine providence?

3. What is the leading thought in this psalm?

4. What Christian enterprises are we called upon to enter?

5. What should we take with us into this service?

6. What fresh starts should be made in America?

Snowden says, "Loss often leads to larger gain. Out of the pit of Babylon came forth a purified and disciplined people who were thereby prepared for their great mission in the world. Out of the lowest dregs of humanity, God can fashion saints. Trials and tears and severity, ashes into beauty and a spirit of heaviness into a garment of praise."

V. 6. "And all they that were around about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, with beasts and with precious things, besides all that was willingly offered; in returning to God we are not to go empty handed but are to take with us all our treasures and use them in his service.

V. 1. "When Jehovah brought back those that returned to Zion, we were like unto them that dream." When anything wonderful takes place we speak of it as a dream. This wonderful event gave birth to psalms of praise.

Vs. 2, 3. "Then was our mouth
filled with laughter and our
tongue with singing; then said
they among the nations, Jehovah
hath done great things for us
whereof we are glad." "God loves
the singing and laughter of the unique and comprehensive way with all modern problems young people have to face today.

"Morality in The Making," by Whitney, Macmillan, discusses the real meaning of morality and formulates principles which will serve as a basis of a technique for effecting moral changes in ourselves and others.

TYPES OF FAILURE
Benedetto Croce, the Italian philosopher, has written about three of the common types of failure.

The visionary or day-dreamer is always making ambitious plans, working out elaborate schemes, and indulging in magnificent intentions but, who after dreaming and talking about them for awhile, forgets them.

The timid man is over-cautious, never sure of himself and is so eager to avoid taking the wrong

2. WHAT ARE SOME OF THE OBSTACLES TO BE OVERCOME
TO EFFECT CHURCH UNITY?

The following statement was issued in the findings of the Christian Herald: "Among the obstacles which must be overcome if the goal is to be reached are the following:

1. Differences of conviction as to the nature of the church.

2. The inherent difficulty of changing methods which have become familiar and through which valuable results are being reached.

3. The difficulty which arises from vested interests.

BURGLARS DRINK UP DOCTOR'S LIQUOR; ENJOY HOUSE PARTY

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 9.—Discovery of a liquor in the basement of a home in which they were prowling changed a routine burglary into a week-end of revelry in the home of Dr. A. H. Rine here for a group of robbers.

Neighbors recalled they had faintly heard the quavering refrain of "Sweet Adeline" during the night. Not until two days later did Dr. Rine check his legal supply of government medicinal liquors to find that the burglars had consumed eleven pints of California brandy and one pint of antique whiskey.

A disordered house indicated that the burglars had lolled in luxury and ease after their basement discovery. A snack had been prepared from food in the ice box and a soft drink bottle, the contents of which had been used in mixed drinks, was found in the kitchen.

Contented as kittens after the revel, the prowlers had removed the cushions from the porch awning and then slept on the davenport and in the stuffed chairs.

Besides the liquor, the burglars obtained jewelry valued at $250. It was apparent to police that the robbers were acquainted with the weekend plans of Dr. Rine and his family.

CHAPTER LVII

"I been gettin' a great kick, myself, out o' the way you younguns have settled down and showed this town that you can work just as hard—and be just as happy—with nothing as with a million dollars."

The judge gave Kent another sideways glance, and saw that his hands were gripped on the wheel of the car—then kept on.

"There was a great many old she cats said she'd married you for your money, and that you'd married her to spite that crazy little empty headed nincompoop you thought you liked once. They gave it just about a year to last—and they all had their eyes open for Vivian to take off some day and hot foot it to Patee for a divorce."

"It made my blood boil when they said she was runnin' around with that artist feller, because she was crazy about him. I knowed better. She was just gettin' her picture fixed by him. I knowed, because she came into the office off and on and we'd have a talk, and she'd tell me about little things and what fun she was havin'—mother-in-you and what a big sweet baby you was."

"You know women—they like that. The more helpless a man is, the more they love him. I couldn't look at them little green eyes of hers, dancin' with love, and not know they was all a bunch of liars that ought to be taken out and strung up in the town square."

When the judge paused for breathing Kent had turned and was looking at him, his jaws set and misery in his eyes. The old man sat up as if with surprise.

"What's the matter, my boy? You don't look so good? Ain't you feelin' well?"

Kent struggled with himself a moment.

"No, I'm not sick."

"The judge thought it best to keep still for a change and see what Kent had to say for himself. He settled back and smoked, chuckling inwardly."

Kent broke the silence.

"Judge, there are a lot of things you don't know about my marriage to Vivian—and a lot of things I can't tell you. All the things you have said sound very beautiful—but it's not quite a correct picture. Vivian is going to divorce me, very soon."

Judge Potter jumped admirably—as though he knew nothing at all about the Matthews-Johns contract marriage.

"Good jumpin' cats, my boy, what are you talkin' about? You're crazy with the heat."

"No, unfortunately, I'm not, judge. I've never really been a husband to her. I've ruined my life and hers, too. I'm afraid. But, of course, she'll marry again."

"Well, well," the judge seemed overcome with grief and disappointment. "Then some o' that gossip is true. It makes me sick, Kent, my boy. I've knowed both of you kids since you was knee high to a sparrow. Don't you want to tell me a little more about it? I'm older'n you are—"

"There's not much use," Kent broke in impatiently. "It just can't be helped. It's my fault—and I'm not good enough for a girl like Vivian. I was a blind, fuddled idiot. Besides, she loves somebody else."

"I wouldn't argue that you're not a blind, fuddled idiot. That's your business, if you want to knock yourself—your oughta know. But, don't tell an old man like me that Vivian don't love you when I know better. For didn't she tell me, with her very own lips—in strict confidence, of course, and I shouldn't be blabbin'—but didn't she tell me only a few weeks ago that she had always loved you and you was the only bird she ever would love. She wasn't talkin' to hear herself talk. I've knowed the kid too long. She's always come to me with her little secrets. Her and me is pals."

It was another monologue. Kent stopped the car at the field and sat searching the face of the old man beside him. The judge looked back at him—hiding the amusement in his old eyes. He certainly had the young whippersnapper stirred up and thinkin'.

Kent heaved his big body from the car, slowly. The little judge followed slowly after him, and when they were going up the path to the hangar he stopped.

"No hard feelin's, Kent. You don't think I'm a nebbly old codger, do you? I ain't meanin' to be that way. But I'd like to see you younguns fix this here fool scrap you had up. It'll be a sin to give the long-tongues the chance to sit back and put her through the mill o' scandal the way they sure will. A nice girl like her. It ain't fair. If you was a man you'd do somethin' about it. What's the matter? Your so-called pride givin' you a dig? Ain't got the gumption to go home tonight and take her in your arms and kiss all the ache and hurt out o' her heart and tell her you love her and from now on—God and she bein' willin'—you're goin' to be the most lovin' and devout husband in this town."

His eyes beamed mischievously, and he dug Kent in the ribs. "Ask me about women, my boy. You didn't know me when I was in my prime!"

Kent said nothing. He walked with his head down and the judge felt keen pity for him. He had rubbed it in a bit hard. But, maybe it would set him to think

The Theater

It is reliably reported on excellent authority that Helen Hayes, well-known and popular Broadway star, will make at least one talkie picture this coming fall.

Miss Hayes went to the Coast some weeks ago to play a limited engagement in her current legitimate hit, "Coquette." Her husband, Charlie McArthur, former newspaperman and co-writer of "Broadway" is in Hollywood writing stories for RKO.

It is now whispered that both Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Famous Players are fighting for the services of Miss Hayes. She will make no definite plans, however, until a certain expected event in her family, is the report.

Of course everyone knows that Al Jolson's real name is Ada Yovel.

Twenty Years '09- '29

While fishing near Indian Riffle a party of Xenia fishermen composed of William Grottenick, Deputy Sheriff W. B. McCallister, Ed Davidson and Harry Klerman caught a ten-pound channel cat fish.

Mr. George Swartz, president and general manager of the police station "chicken establishment," gathered five eggs yesterday. He at once declared a "five-egg dividend" in favor of himself and took the bunch home.

Dr. W. A. Galolway will give his address on the "Municipal Needs of Xenia" at the next meeting of the Commercial Club.

Monte Blue is playing the role in the picture "Rose" that Willard Mack created on Broadway when Lenore Ulric enacted the title part.

William Von Hardenberg, who enacts the role of court minister in "The Love Parade," Maurice Chevalier's new flicker, sort of doubles in professions.

Von Hardenberg is a German count, an adventurer and a citizen of the world. He is a graduate mining engineer from Germany's foremost technical school and followed this profession for years in Alaska, China, South Africa, South America, Mexico and the U. S. A.

He has seen services in the German army, in the Boer War and with Uncle Sam's troops during the Spanish-American battle. For the last twelve years he has lived in Los Angeles. He started to write after the World War but out of the car. I'll slip out and you'll pull me back in like you did Miss Hix," said Chester.

Chester began sliding from the chair, snook pulled him onto the floor, leaning far over him.

From that position on the floor his back against Snook's knee the prosecutor went on with the questioning.

Q—And she got out after you hit her again?

A—Yes.

Q—And you got out after her?

A—Yes.

Q—Then she reached into the car for her purse?

A—Yes.

Q—And it was then you hit her a real hard blow and she went down?

A—Yes.

Q—And what next?

A—Well, I remember nothing more until I found myself sitting on the running board of the car with my elbows on my knee.

Q—Now did you say to us that you cut her throat?

A—I did not say it.

Q—You say you did not say it?

A—Yes.

Q—And if we say you did we are lost?

A—Yes.

Q—When you were on the running board of the car and saw Miss Hix on the ground what did you do?

A—I spoke to her.

A—I don't recall but I said something.

Chester was speaking in an almost reverent tone now and Snook's voice followed his.

Q—Did she answer you?

A—No.

Q—What did you do?

A—I left. I was scared.

Q—Scared of your shadow?

A—Yes indeed.

Q—And you drove away leaving her dead?

A—I spoke to her and she didn't answer.

Q—So you left her, dead?

The effect on the jury of the recital was varied. Two men leaned far forward with eyes glued on the witness. Another gazed around the room and seemed little interested. Another yawned. Several just looked at the floor.

Mrs. Harry Cassidy, in the delicate position of the only woman member, was motionless, looking straight ahead.

Snook next related how he stopped to buy a paper on the way home and was quickly carried to the events of the following day. He admitted he had burned Miss Hix's slippers and his pajamas in his furnace. He testified again he had thrown away Miss Hix's purse the night of the murder.

"Now didn't you burn her purse?" Chester snapped suddenly.

"No," Snook said.

"When did you burn her compact?"

"I didn't."

Despite the injuries he said Miss Hix inflicted upon him Mr. Snook said he did not consult a doctor about them although he had a doctor treat his hand the night after the murder and although he was in pain.

The two men matching wits and brains with a life at stake are directly opposed in personality, and in appearance. Snook is cool, calculating, colorless. His manner is of the class room. His voice is almost without quality. He never raises it. His age is forty-nine. Chester is young, handsome, intelligent, but hot of temper. Time after time he flares up and always there is an assistant beside him quietly tugging at his coat-tails to get him back into his chair. It is tradition in Columbus that the court room rages of Jack Chester are terrible affairs. His voice is now snarling, now sarcastic and again coaxing. His prosecution of Dr. Snook has been unrelenting, and his examination today will be its climax.

Dr. Snook had a taste of what was ahead of him in the closing hour of yesterday's session when Chester held up to him a series of letters which he had written to Miss Hix and which Miss Hix for some reason, had kept.

The letters began "My dear," and all over one were signed "Mabel." The one not signed "Mabel," was signed "Janette."

The more Dr. Snook's mouth fell and the more his face flushed, the more of the letters did Chester expose until he had laid before a gasping courtroom a correspondence of shocking content.

Then he wrung from the witness with a sudden question an admission that he had performed upon himself an indescribable personal operation and almost gloatingly required the witness to tell of it, its purpose and its effect in detail.

Dr. Snook, earlier in the day, had wept on two occasions. But it had been a sudden outburst each time. Within five minutes he had been as cool, as outwardly collected, as ever. But with the letters, the story of the operation and the ruthlessness of the prosecutor, he seemed to be wilting, slowly and surely. He stirred in his chair. He rubbed his face violently. He twiddled his hands. Then he looked out over the courtroom filled with 300 women, and 100 men; seemed to think of what had been read from the letters and what he had said; and once more his mouth sagged, his face flushed and he remained a shame-faced man until court closed.

In the midst of it all Chester suddenly stared at Dr. Snook and snapped:

"Dr. Snook, are you insane?"

"I must have been," he answered.

"But are you now?"

Snook looked helplessly at his attorneys. One rose and objected, but the court ordered the question answered.

"I don't know," he said, in a voice that was almost plaintive.

Chester indicated last night that he is not done with the reading of the letters. He proposes, also, to take him over again all that long story of sordid relationship which has so shocked all who heard.

Attracted by the drama of the situation, crowds were at the courthouse throughout yesterday and today even greater throngs are expected. It is possible, however, that they will be disappointed for Judge Henry L. Searlett last night said he was considering clearing the courtroom.

out of the car. I'll slip out and you pull me back in like you did Miss Hix," said Chester.

Chester began sliding from the chair. Snook pulled him onto the floor, leaning far over him.

From that position on the floor his back against Snook's knee the prosecutor went on with the questioning.

Q—And she got out after you hit her again?

A—Yes.

Q—And you got out after her?

A—Yes.

Q—Then she reached into the car for her purse?

A—Yes.

Q—And it was then you hit her a real hard blow and she went down?

A—Yes.

Q—And what next?

A—Well, I remember nothing more until I found myself sitting on the running board of the car with my elbows on my knee.

Q—Now did you say to us that you cut her throat?

A—I did not say it.

Q—You say you did not say it?

A—Yes.

Q—And if we say you did we are liars?

A—Yes.

Q—When you were on the running board of the car and saw Miss Hix on the ground what did you do?

A—I spoke to her.

Q—I don't recall but I said something.

Chester was speaking in an almost reverent tone now and Snook's voice followed his.

Q—Did she answer you?

A—No.

Q—What did you do?

A—I left. I was scared.

Q—Scared of your shadow?

A—Yes indeed.

Q—And you drove away leaving her dead?

A—I spoke to her and she didn't answer.

Q—See you left her, dead?
